WORLD AFFAIRS

A Foreign Service Reading List

Compiled by Ruth Savord, Librarian, Council on Foreign Relations, Inc.

The purpose of the following Reading List is to suggest to the present or prospective Foreign Service Officer material that will provide a general background and understanding of world affairs. It is unofficial in every sense. The Compiler and the American Foreign Service Journal deem it advisable to point out that it has no specific connection with preparation for the Foreign Service examinations.

The criteria in selecting material have been: (1) up-to-dateness; (2) readability; (3) general coverage of areas and subjects (with a few titles on specific countries and areas); (4) impartiality, in so far as possible; (5) availability. This last consideration has eliminated most out-of-print books but, where particularly important, a few of these have been included. These, indicated by o. p., may be found in the second-hand market or in most libraries.

The officer assigned to a specific country or area will wish to read material dealing in more detail with that country or area than the limitations of space permit including here.

The only Government Documents and Documents of the League of Nations, United Nations and other international organizations which are included are those containing information not readily available elsewhere.
